Air Conditioning Manufacturers strongly recommend a preventative maintenance program for your air conditioning and heating system. The idea is to keep minor problems from developing into major ones and to insure the optimal efficiency of your system. Proper maintenance can effectively double the life span of your residential heating & cooling system. Also, can prevent voided warranties on your equipment.

Air Stream offers two types of preventative maintenance plans. A twice-a-year preventive maintenance is recommended for optimal performance and stability. We also offer a once-a-year preventive maintenance to our customers. Each tune-up will include the following and much more:

- Check Refrigerant levels
- Flush and clear A/C Drain Line
- Clear drain Pan and add algaecide tablets
- Check system in both heating & cooling operations
- Check and tightening of high voltage wiring and connections
- Check thermostat operation and proper air temperature readings
- Clean Condensing coils (where accessible)
- Check all amp draws for proper electrical consumption
- Perform visual inspection of duct work
- Clean or replace filter (provided by owners)
- Check temperature differential
